Some Pretty and Picturesque Tea Gowns for This Season.

Outdoor Dresses of Fawn Corduroy Cloth.

The tea gowns of this season are nothing if not picturesque. Some are of the Empire period: some are semi-classical; the majority have Watteau trains. One of the prettiest seen was in mauve and white-the back mauve and white striped and flowered brocade, the front nothing but soft billows of chiffon and cascades of cream lace. The sleeves were entirely of chiffon and very full, with lace ruffles at the wrists. Another lovely tea gown was of yellow bengaline with a graceful War-teau drapery of black lace falling from the back of the collar to the bottom of 2.00 the train and a flounce of lace on the bodice which formed a sort of cape. The sleeves reached to the wrists, but were made to appear double by being trimmed at the cibov with face frills and rippons. The waist was short in front, though of ordinary length at the back, and outlined across the bust by a band of black watered ribbon from which fell long ribbon streamers.

A man has just died of blood poisoning from a cut of a barber's razor. Here is an argument in favor of wearing beards.

Jessie Bartlett Davis is a pretty woman with a grama voice, but, better still, she has a heart suscentible to suffering, as is shown by her gift of $50 to the Sick Bables' Fund.

VACRANT VERSES.

The Telephone. Oh, a rose and a pink have bloomed to-day?"
Said little lame Kith to her mother.
If watched them ores, leaf by leaf.
And they needed to each other
to it there was something they wished to say—
A secret, you know—and there was no way.

"And then a spider with wondrous skill— You'll hardy believe it, mother— Stretched a web from the pink to the rose, So they could take to each other. And ever sions then their heads are still, For they say through their telephone what they will."—St. Nicholas, The Four Deuces. The dence of Spades is that they dig our graves.
